The YRC volunteers next went to the Health and Hygiene Sessions, where they were taught the value of medical examinations, blood drives, and human health. A few of the health awareness programs focus on topics like the value of prenatal care and safe childbirth.

The doctors then discussed the value of physiotherapy with the YRC volunteers, emphasizing its application in the treatment of physical impairments, disabilities, and pain via education, manual therapy, and exercise. The doctors and volunteers spoke, and the doctors answered some of the Volunteer's doubts.

The physicians then gave the YRC volunteers a lesson on the value of blood banks and blood donation. In order to protect donors, eligibility for the test is usually checked before donation. Following that, the blood is gathered and kept under strict guidelines for later use.
